

Transforming Conflict Facilitating Nonviolence A Facilitator's Guide

The purpose of the Transforming Conflict module is to enable the participant to develop and experience the use of communication skills for nonviolence to transform conflict and to negotiate with other people. The participants explore the extent of violence and nonviolence in everyday life. A safe respectful environment is created for learning to occur. In this safe environment participants are able to experience skills and strategies which are appropriate in real life situations. Participants can have fun experiencing these skills through co-operative group active learning activities.

On successful completion of the Transforming Conflict module, the participant will have experienced:

- community through the group activities in the module
- commitment to social responsibility
- overt affirmation and how it affects individuals.

On successful completion of this module, the participant will be able to:

- use community building and affirmation (respect and caring for self and others) skills
- identify strategies for conflict transformation/resolution and negotiation
- use a variety of conflict transformation strategies and communication skills
- demonstrate the use of conflict transformation communication skills to transform a conflict and to negotiate an outcome
